

Trade Receivables

Chapman and Cutler has extensive experience representing clients in virtually all aspects of financing trade receivables funded through commercial paper conduits, bank-funded warehousing facilities, and stand-alone securitizations. Representative transactions have included healthcare receivables, receivables from the sale of manufactured goods, telecommunications receivables, and many other industries. Chapman attorneys have substantial experience in structuring cross-border trade receivables transactions. Our lawyers are also familiar with applicable U.S. and international accounting and tax issues and can help originators advance their tax and accounting objectives.
