

Representational Roles

The roles of Chapman and Cutler LLP's public finance attorneys are ever-changing. For decades, we represented clients solely in the traditional roles of bond counsel, underwriter's counsel and trustee's counsel. Now, the firm's public finance practice includes such diverse areas as credit enhancement and municipal tax controversy work. In addition, we are known as leaders in the complex world of securitizations, swaps and derivative products. Regardless of a client's public finance needs, the firm is committed to a practice that is dynamic, effective and responsive.
