

Technology and Payment Processing

Chapman and Cutler counsels clients in all aspects of technology and payment processing matters. We analyze technology-related contracts for clients, focusing on such critical aspects as acquisition and maintenance of hardware; the procurement, licensing and maintenance of software; software development arrangements; customization; and various types of confidentiality agreements.

In addition to reviewing and negotiating major transaction documents, we prosecute and defend patent infringement claims and other violations of proprietary information rights.

Additionally, we work with our clients on cash management programs, provide or receive processing and other vendor services and outsource functions as client needs dictate.

Representative Transactions

- We developed a master services agreement and service descriptions for the cash management program of a major regional bank.
- Our firm negotiated major service agreements with national vendors for all aspects of technology and payment processing.
- Chapman attorneys negotiated an ATM purchase, software and maintenance agreement for a major regional bank.

Attorneys

Amanda Delaney

Marc P. Franson

Kathryn A. Puls

Related Practices

Banking and Financial Services

Cash Management and Payment Systems

Credit Card Lending and Processing

Gift Cards and Other Stored Value Cards

Outsourcing and Vendor Service Agreements

Payment Products and Systems