Michael Dov Nogroski is Chapman's Chief Innovation Officer. He oversees the firm's Practice Innovations department and strategic initiatives to develop technology systems and processes that promote working smarter, leverage the collective knowledge of the firm, reduce risk, and increase efficiency and collaboration to the continuous benefit of our clients. He works directly with the Innovations and Technology Partner, firm attorneys, Information Services, and other departments to develop the firm's advanced technology strategy.

Michael combines over 20 years of technology experience with 15 years legal experience, both as an attorney and in knowledge management. He started his career in Austin, Texas working in the tech sector and later attended law school. He has led and consulted on many complex technology initiatives, including an award-winning internal portal project. He also has extensive experience developing web-based platforms between law firms and clients that facilitate collaboration, information distribution, and matter oversight.

Michael previously worked as the Team Lead for the IT Business Analyst group at McDermott Will & Emery, LLP and as a Senior Knowledge Management Analyst at Seyfarth Shaw, LLP.
